Ninth Sunday after Pentecost

The First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, x. 6-13.
Brethren: We should not covet evil things, as they also coveted. Neither become ye idolaters, as some of them: as it is written: The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. ...

What is it to tempt God?

It is presumptuously to expect signs of God's omnipotence, benignity, providence, and justice. Such a sin it would be,

- 1, to desire that matters of faith should be made known and confirmed by new miracles;
- 2, to expose ourselves unnecessarily to danger of body or soul, expecting God to deliver us;
- 3, to reject the ordinary and natural means of deliverance in sickness or other peril, trusting in God's immediate assistance.

The Holy Gospel of Jesus Christ, According to St. Luke, xix. 41-47. At that time when Jesus drew near Jerusalem, seeing the city, He wept over it, saying: If thou also hadst known, and that in this thy day, the things that are to thy peace, but now they are hidden from thy eyes. And entering into the temple, He began to cast out them that sold therein, and them that bought, ...

Why did the Saviour weep over the city of Jerusalem?

Because it had not known and profited by its time of visitation, and through impenitence was hastening to destruction.

Does God hide from the wicked the truths of salvation?

No; but sinners so blind themselves by their sins that the divine inspirations fail to move them to penance.

What do we learn by Jesus casting out of the temple those who sold and bought?

We learn how severely He will punish those who in church forget where they are; forget that Jesus Christ is present in the tabernacle; who laugh, talk, amuse themselves, cherish sinful thoughts, and give scandal by their improper dress and unbecoming behavior.

Labor Day Weekend: Please advise whether you expect to be here or away during Labor Day weekend (Sep 3-5)

Hurricane Season: Tropical storms may disrupt travel during August and September. We make our plans, then put the outcome in the hands of Providence. Please be zealous and flexible should we need to re-schedule.

Some projects to maintain and improve the church. Please adopt and complete one. Contact Father for details.
