The First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, xiii. 1-13. Brethren: If I speak with the tongues of men, and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal;

St. Paul here teaches the Romans, and us in them, the necessity, the qualities, and the advantages of charity: The necessity - because all natural and supernatural gifts - all good works, virtues, and sacrifices - even martyrdom itself - cannot save us if we have no charity. By charity only are we and our works pleasing to God.

The qualities of charity - which are good-will without envy, suspicion, perversity, or malice; pure intention without self-love, ambition, immodesty, or injustice; untiring patience without hastiness; and finally, humble submission to God, Who is all to him that possesses charity.

The advantages of charity - in that it gives to good works their value, and that it never fails; for while all things else cease - while faith passes into seeing, hope into possession, knowledge in part into knowledge of the whole - charity is everlasting, and therefore the greatest of the three. "Faith," says St. Augustine, "lays the foundation of the house of God; hope builds up the walls; charity covers and completes it."

The Holy Gospel of Jesus Christ, According to St. Luke, xviii. 31-43. At that time: Jesus took unto Him the twelve, and said to them: Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and all things shall be accomplished which were written by the prophets concerning the Son of man; ...

Why did Our Saviour so often predict His sufferings to His apostles?

To show that He already knew of them, thereby indicating

1. His omniscience; and that,
2. He desired to suffer.
3. In order that His disciples should not be scandalized at His humiliation, nor think evil of Him as if He had deceived them, but, by remembering His words, be rather confirmed in their belief in Him as the Son of God and Redeemer of the world.

Did not the apostles understand anything of what He thus predicted in regard to His sufferings?

They may have known that He was to suffer, for St. Peter undertook to dissuade Him from it (Matt. xvi. 22), but they could not reconcile these predictions with their expectation of a future glorious kingdom. Nor would we be able to cast off our prejudices, and understand the truths of the faith, however plainly taught, were we not enlightened by the Holy Ghost.

What should we learn from this history of the blind man?

The inexpressible misfortune of blindness of the heart - a state in which we know not our God, our Redeemer and Sanctifier, and see neither the way of divine life, nor the hindrances to our salvation, but grope about in the darkness of ignorance and sin.

Lenten Alms Project: Assistance to a bed-ridden recent convert in North Carolina.

Lenten Fast Rules - These apply to those between 21 and 59 years of age. One ordinary sized main meal is permitted each day. There may be two lesser meatless meals which do not add up to a main meal. Meat may be eaten at the main meal except on days of abstinence. There may be no snacking between meals, but beverages may be taken at any time.
